

TIP 3 MAKE THEM FEEL GREAT!

Many women may feel that flirting is uncomfortable, silly, attention-seeking, or demeaning. However, if flirting is seen as a tool for making another person feel great and special, a woman may find she enjoys the experience. When she focuses on making another person smile, warm up, share more, laugh easier, or stand taller, she discovers that flirting can be a win/win for others and for herself. This, also, makes her appear happy, confident, warm, inviting, and interesting, which is very attractive and intriguing to men.

TIP 4 BE A CHALLENGE

When a woman understands that a man will only love, value, and appreciate her when he sacrifices for her, it becomes clear that she must encourage him to feel challenged and driven to seek her time and energy. He needs the experience and thrill of walking across the room to meet her, maintain a conversation, ask for her number, call her, ask her on a date, pay for the date, pursue her further and more. She encourages this process when she looks him in the eyes and smiles from across the room, shows interest in him, asks his name, touches him on the arm, and then within ten minutes expresses how much she would enjoy talking to him again (rather than lingering too long in the conversation and creating boredom).

A man knows how to pursue the things he wants. If he is interested he will pursue her number and invest his time and energy into getting to know her. By giving warmth but limiting how much time or energy she gives him (until he puts effort and investment into getting to know her), she increases the likelihood that he will appreciate her more (rather than quickly become bored or disinterested).
